WELLINGTON
August 4, 1958

January 14, 1959, marks the centenary of the arrival of the "Strathallan" with the first settlers to reach Timaru by sea.

The subsequent development of the South Canterbury District, so well endowed by Nature, and the progress of the City, Port and other towns, speak much for the foresight and enterprise of those early pioneers and their successors.

It gives me much pleasure to convey to the people of South Canterbury my warmest congratulations on their splendid achievement to date, and my best wishes for the success of the Centenary Celebrations and the continued progress of the District in the future.

Governor-General

Message from the President

In South Canterbury, we are at the turn of a century and, as we pause and briefly look back at the past 100 years, we can do so with pride as we consider the achievements of our forefathers. From tussock-covered wilderness they converted the land into the prosperous farms we have today. The rural villages at their hands have become a prosperous city and solid country towns.

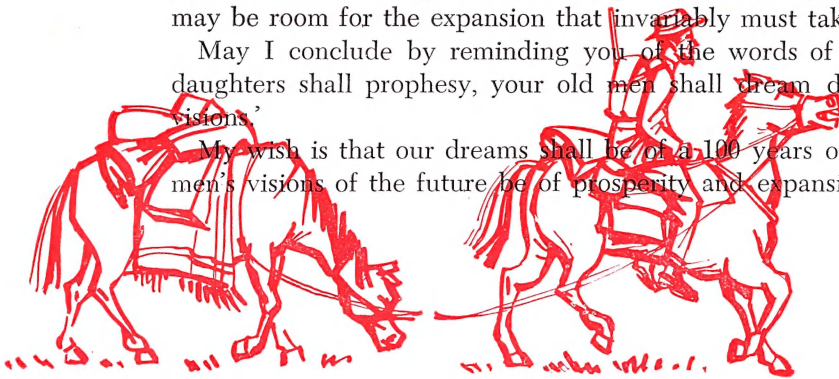

Having myself recently re-crossed the oceans they sailed across in frail sailing ships, buffeted by every storm, I, in the comfort of a modern passenger ship, can appreciate the faith they had in the future when they left home, kith and kin to establish South Canterbury. We today are reaping the rewards of their enterprise.

May we not be content to be satisfied with South Canterbury as we know it today but may we go forward into the second hundred years resolved to guard the inheritance that is ours. May we conserve the soil for our children so that it may be not impoverished but enriched. May our plans for development of our city and towns be visionary, so that there may be room for the expansion that invariably must take place.

May I conclude by reminding you of the words of the prophet Joel: 'Your sons and daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions.'

My wish is that our dreams shall be of a 100 years of achievement and may our young men's visions of the future be of prosperity and expansion for South Canterbury.

R. E. White.

The Progress of South Canterbury

Although the arrival of the immigrant ship "Strathallan" on January 14, 1859, is regarded as the foundation of South Canterbury, white settlement predated this event. The Rhodes Brothers had applied for a large block of land in June 1851 extending "between the Rivers Opihi and Makikihi being 15 miles along the coast and about the same inland". These boundaries were considerably modified in the later applications. Major Alfred Hornbrook of Temuka applied a few days later for the block described as "bounded on the north by the Oapi, south by the river Opihi, east by the native reserve at Horauana, inland on the west by the back range of hills". Other applicants followed and the lessees were soon living on and farming their land.

The site of Timaru had been excluded from the pastoral licence so that on the arrival of the immigrants sections were available for them although as no accommodation was available they had to remain on the "Strathallan" for an extra two days.

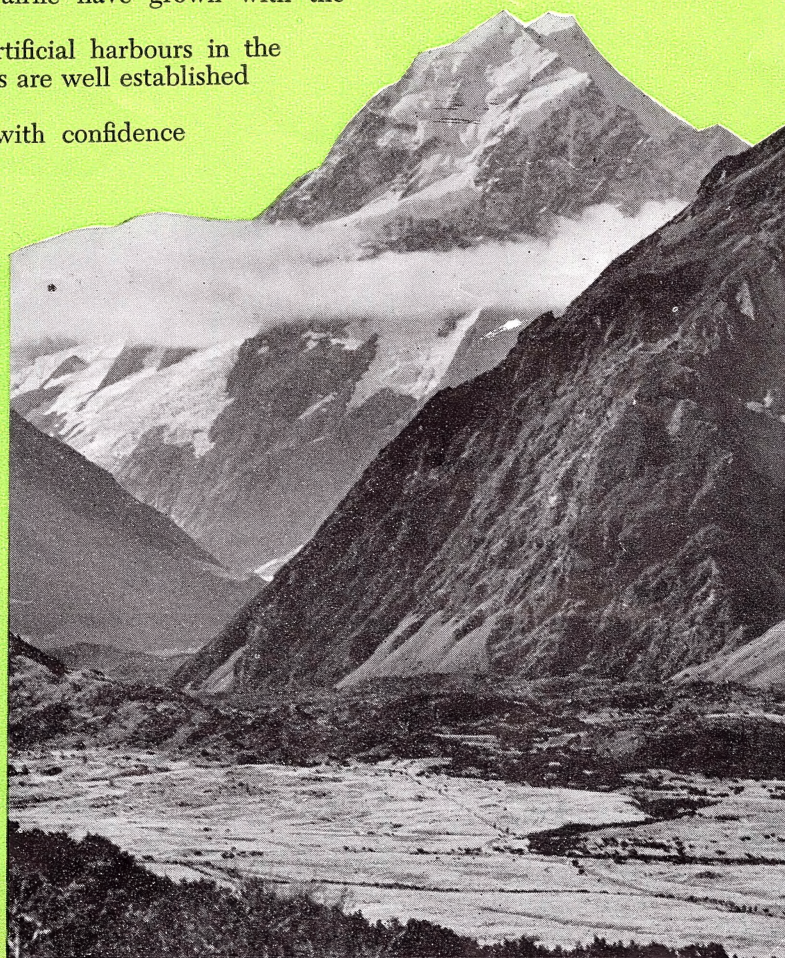

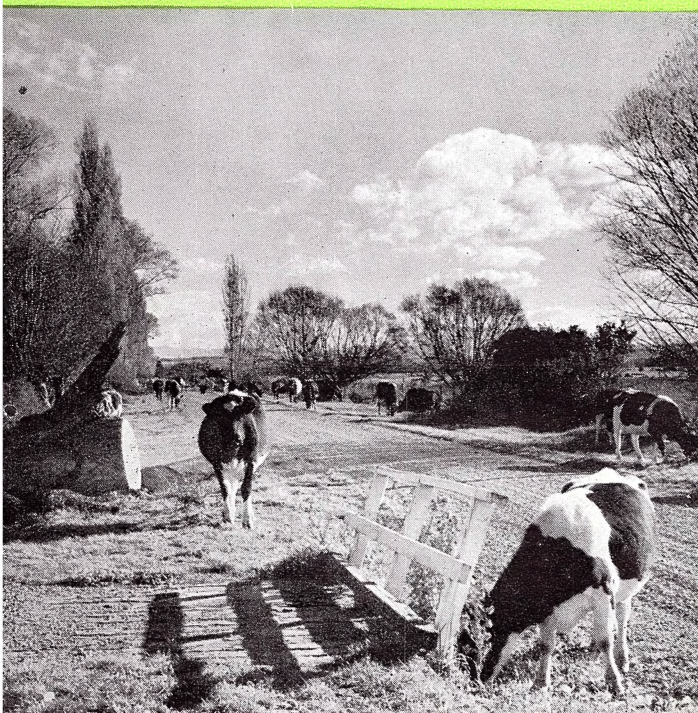

The district soon progressed and the development of the harbour enabled the graziers to ship their wool direct from Timaru. The development of the frozen meat industry and the erection of the freezing works at Smithfield and Pareora greatly increased the prosperity of the district.

The breaking up of the larger runs by the Government at the turn of the century enabled more intensive production to be carried out and encouraged closer settlement. South Canterbury has been well farmed during the past century. Mistakes have been quickly rectified and today the land is in good heart.

The capital city of Timaru and the boroughs of Waimate, Temuka and Geraldine and the county township of Fairlie have grown with the prosperity of the district.

Today Timaru has one of the finest artificial harbours in the Southern Hemisphere. Secondary industries are well established and the population is steadily growing.

South Canterbury can look forwards with confidence to the second century.

GERALDINE, a very picturesque town, is set in a typical English countryside with hedgerows and English trees. The Waihi River flows through the town. Geraldine is the family name of the Fitzgeralds, perpetuating the name of James E. Fitzgerald, first Superintendent of the province of Canterbury.

TEMUKA, the fishermen's paradise, is a borough eleven miles north of Timaru. In easy distance are the Opihi, Waihi, Temuka and Orari Rivers which are excellent fishing rivers. Industry is well represented in the town by a pottery and insulator works and a wool scour. The name is a corruption of Te Umukaha which means "the hot oven". In the days of the Maori many ovens were situated on the banks of the river.

WAIMATE, the garden town of South Canterbury, was founded as a sawmill town but a disastrous fire not only burnt out the town but also burnt the bush. Recovery was slow but today it is a prosperous town with a population of 3,107. Scenic attractions include Waimate Gorge, Kelcey's Bush and Waihao Forks. The name is a contraction of Waimatemate and means "slowly moving waters".

FAIRLIE is a country township in the Mackenzie County. Having an altitude of 1,000 feet, the air is most invigorating. The town was originally named Fairlie Creek after Fairlie in Scotland.
